HOME: Patrick Swayze

Swayze out of hospital after week

ACTOR Patrick Swayze has been released from hospital a week after he checked himself in for observation.

The Dirty Dancing and Ghost star, who is battling pancreatic cancer, is now back home and resting with his wife, Lisa Niemi.

His spokeswoman said: "I am happy to announce that Patrick Swayze is home after a brief hospitalisation for pneumonia."

Swayze (56) was forced to cancel an appearance to promote his new television series, the crime drama The Beast, which started in the US last Thursday.

Treatment

He has said that his cancer treatment, including chemotherapy, has been "hell" and that he does not expect to live much longer than two years, but he is still upbeat. "I am alive to plan on continuing to stay that way," he said.

Meanwhile, it has emerged he had a secret weapon during the gruelling shot of his new TV series - his 52-year-old wife. She went to work with him in Chicago every day while he was undergoing chemotherapy as well as filming.

VICTORY FOR STARDUST

THE Stardust Victim's Committee will finally get a copy of a report into the disaster which had been withheld from them.

Relatives staged a three-day sit-in protest at the Government buildings during the week to demand the report which a government official agreed would be released this coming Thursday.

Antoinette Keegan's sisters Martina and Mary were among 48 young people who died in the nightclub blaze in February 1981. She said despite repeated requests, it took the protest to get what they wanted.

MESMERISING: Quinn guides a client through his hypnotic mind-bending process

Mind guru tells clients to use the 'force' at classes

THESE are the amazing scenes from inside 'Messiah' Tony Quinn's secretive €63,500 mind-bending seminars.

The images are the first glimpse outsiders have had of what goes on inside the sessions in the sun.

Thousands of Irish people have forked out huge amounts to spend two weeks in the sun-soaked Bahamas listening to a man who some followers believe is Jesus Christ.

Participants, many of them Irish, writhe on the floor in ecstasy as the guru walks among them dressed like a Costa del Sol tour rep in blue shorts and a canary yellow t-shirt.

Their bodies jerk and jump, their heads flail from left to right, their arms crash about their sides, legs lift and drop and their faces are set in pure pleasure.

Quinn has told them an energy - which he calls The Force like in the Star Wars movies - is surging through their bodies.

And just like in the movies, he tells followers the energy it produces will enhance physical and mental abilities.

Lover

It was during one of these ecstasy-inducing sessions that the 62-year-old former butcher from Dublin met his stunning busty 23-year-old South African lover who he christened 'Eve' after the first woman in the bible.

Quinn tells his flock that summoning The Force will change their destiny forever and allow them live the 'designer lives' they dream of.

But a leading doctor claims that people are simply in a deep state of hypnotic relaxation and their 'shakes' are brought on by nothing more than the powerful suggestion of Quinn's words.

Last week the Sunday World revealed how an incredible 3,000 people have already handed over €18,500 to attend the seminars while a further 400 have paid €63,500 for his 'master classes' - which affords them a brief aura fixing with the guru.

We have conservatively estimated that Quinn has amassed a €50 million fortune from gullible people who believe he is the Messiah.

Today we can unveil exactly what happens behind closed doors at Paradise Island or in the other exotic locations where he holds these secret seminars.

In never before published footage we show how participants are lulled into deep states of hypnosis by the Dubliner and then encouraged to 'Feel The Force' - an experience experts say is a high similar to that given from drugs like ecstasy.

LOVER: Tony Quinn with girlfriend 'Eve'

Those who have attended say the guru then uses his skills as a hypnotist to bring them into a deeply relaxed state before urging them to feel the energy within themselves which he tells them will travel to their heads, arms and legs.

Our pictures show how he then whips the groups up into states of ecstasy as their bodies jolt from their chairs in fit-like seizures. Many laugh and roll their heads in sheer pleasure.

Quinn then lays his hands on a member of the group claiming his touch serves to "bring the overall energy levels up to the benefit of the entire group".

On one part of the film which is used to promote the seminars to would-be clients,
