title clash with Chris Eubank. Quinn described himself as Collins's 'mental coach' and boasted after his victory that he had hypnotised him to feel no pain.

As the business continued to grow Quinn started one-on-one sessions where clients got to spend two weeks alone with the guru at a cost of £100,000.

Followers paid for their own flights and for their money got a 13-day session with Quinn and one day off to admire the stunning setting of Paradise Island.

One individual, who does not want to be named, said the courses ran between 10am to mid-day with one of Quinn's cohorts, while the guru himself lectured between 1pm and 7pm.

"It was very intense and people often talked about all sorts of problems in their lives from anything like abuse they had suffered to marital difficulties - very personal things."

When clients return to Ireland they are paraded on stage at the regular Educo meetings followers held across the country.

Seminar

They speak about the benefits they believed they had gained from the seminar and urge others to dig deep and do the same.

This week Quinn has returned to Ireland to host a 'free' seminar today at the RDS which can be attended by anyone who has already paid for a seminar abroad.
