THEY have crippled their church with a massive €18 million debt but the bosses of the bust Victory Christian Fellowship have spent years buying up a staggering amount of property for themselves.

Today the Sunday World lifts the lid on the astonishing portfolio owned by pastors Brendan and Sheila Hade and some of their family.

The one-time electrician and his wife and their sons have at least 30 homes, some of them luxury mansions.

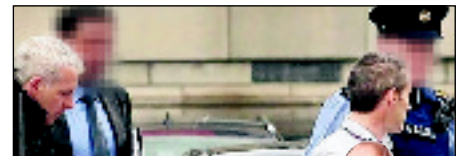

And their property empire stretches from Dublin as far as Galway and Waterford.

On top of that, we can reveal that their playboy son Brian (44), a former male model, has had his 30ft speedboat seized at Dun Laoghaire marina because of non-payment of berthing fees.

The former Lamborghini-driving father of three, who ditched his wife Majella after starting an affair with a young Latvian girl he met in a bar, has also had two helicopters impounded.

Former followers of the controversial Church were last night demanding to know where the money came to finance such an astonishing lifestyle.

The Sunday World was the first to reveal earlier this month how Victory had lost its charitable status following an investigation by Revenue.

Donations

The move sparked the Bank of Scotland, who were owed €18 million in loans by Victory and a further €2 million by the Hades for two of their own premises, to call in receivers.

The Hades and fellow pastor, Gerry Byrne, ask followers to donate one tenth of their earnings to their church.

They preach that the "more money you give, the more blessings you get" and
